1. Introduction

Research has consistently shown a link between pupil performance and teacher skills and competence. The Teacher Preparation and Continuing Professional Development in Kenya study aimed at filling the gap in knowledge about how the initial and continuing education of teachers impacts on their practice in Kenya. The focus of the study was on the preparation that teachers who teach reading and mathematics in the lower primary grades receive and what support is available through Continuing Professional Development (CPD) to teach these subjects.